Creole Line Serves Port For 45 Years

The May issue of the Port of Houston MAGAZINE, in a story announcing the opening of sailings by the Saguarro Line, unwittingly stated this was the only direct service offering direct West and East bound sailings between Italian ports and U. S. Gulf ports.

The Creole Line, with headquarters in Genoa, has been offering direct service to and from the Gulf and Italian ports for 68 years and between Houston and Italian ports for more than 45 years. (See Port of Houston MAGAZINE, May, 1962.)

We sincerely regret this oversight and hereby wish to recognize the long and faithful service of the Creole Line to the ports of the Gulf and, especially, to the Port of Houston.
Side by side, these two submarines moored off Brady Island on the Houston Ship Channel represent two different eras of submarining. In the foreground is the World War II vintage sub, the U.S.S. CABRILLO, long used by Naval Reserve submarine personnel for training and now destined as a memorial undersea craft in Galveston. Taking the CABRILLO's place for training purposes is the U.S.S. CAVALLA, a more modern submarine which has an external and internal layout similar to present day nuclear submarines.

One of the newest members of Houston's world trade community is George Van Haght, a native South African who recently was appointed assistant vice president of South African Marine Corporation of New York (Safmarine) and assigned to the Port of Houston as liaison officer between the firm's New York headquarters and its Gulf agents, Hansen and Tideman, Inc. Van Haght is a veteran Safmarine employee of 17 years, previously having worked in personnel and as a buyer in the freight sales division of the company. He says he is looking forward to the mid-August arrival in Houston of Safmarine's newly launched, 511-foot S.A. CONSTANTA on its maiden voyage.

Independence is the key to low-cost shipping. Orient Overseas Line offers three regular express services from U.S. Atlantic & Gulf Ports to the Far East & Southeast Asia, including direct sailings between New York and Manila. Cargo vans, reefer and deep tank space available.
The Orient Overseas Line's newest vessel, the 12,000 ton M/V LING YUNG, was in Houston last month on its maiden voyage and was the site of a gala welcoming celebration arranged by Lone Star Shipping Co., agents for the Line. Capt. M. Y. Stone, representative of Orient Overseas Line with headquarters in New York, was on hand, and many Houstonians recognized another old friend in the new ship's master, Capt. S. Y. Huang, who brought in the Line's former flagship, M/V. RU YUNG, on her maiden voyage half a dozen years ago. In the photo at left Captain Huang receives the traditional maiden voyage plaque presented by the Navigation District and the Houston Junior Chamber of Commerce from Jaycee Ron Stone. Behind him is Captain Stone, P. A. Grana, president of Lone Star Shipping, and Rufus Arriage, far left, executive vice president of Lone Star. At right, Captain Huang sports a Texas hat received from County Judge Bill Elliott, while Chinese Consul General T. K. Chu beams approval. George W. Altwater, deputy director of the Port of Houston, was master of ceremonies at the presentations.

HOUSTON: a vital link in the chain of Lykes 6 trade routes

Generations of LYKES shipping experience are back of today's outstanding service to the export-import trade.

Our new cargo fleet is among America's finest and fastest with more 20-knot ships than any other single privately-owned fleet in the world. They are regularly and dependably scheduled.
R. G. (Roy) Gonzales, well-known in Houston and Texas maritime shipping circles for many years, has been appointed manager of the Houston office of Caldwell & Co., one of the largest and oldest freight forwarding firms in the United States. The new Houston branch office is located in the Petroleum Building. Caldwell & Co. now have Gulf offices in Houston and New Orleans, with headquarters in New York. Gonzales has been in the freight forwarding and export field for more than 22 years.

NEW FLOMERICA AGENTS
The Dalton Steamship Corporation, steamship agents and operators, have been appointed as general agents in the U.S. Gulf for Flomerca Line as of July 1. The Flomerca Line vessels will load and unload at the Dalton Steamship Line terminals in Houston and New Orleans. Flomerca Line is offering weekly direct service to the port of Matias de Galvez and the port of Barrios in Guatemala, the port of Cortes, Honduras, and including El Salvador through Barrios.

ANNUAL REPORT IS OFF THE PRESS
The Port of Houston's Annual Report for 1967 has been published and is available to anyone interested in the operations of the port. Requests for copies should be addressed to the Executive Director, The Port of Houston, P. O. Box 2562, Houston, Texas 77001.
Guide Book Published

The Houston Guide and Handbook has just been brought out by Tifco Publications and fills a long existing void by providing a handy reference and information guide on all phases of the city's activity, including the Port and international trade.

The guide covers not only Houston itself, but also the NASA-Galveston area down to the Gulf Coast. It includes detailed maps, business and industrial data, census and population facts, general area information and specifics on the Port of Houston, the Texas Medical Center and the Ship Channel industrial complex.

Peter C. Maffitt of the Tifco Inter-America Corporation is editor and the guide is available at news stands, bookstores or from the publisher.

CAPT. LAMBDIN'S ADDRESS

Captain H. B. Lambdin, marine surveyor, consultant and appraiser for many years at the Port of Houston, is now at the Golden Age Manor, S.E., at 7633 Bellfort, Houston 77017. Captain Lambdin is well remembered in Houston maritime shipping circles for his work on cargo condition and damage surveys over the many years he was active here, and has asked that his friends be advised through the Port of Houston MAGAZINE of his present whereabouts.

Art Macy doesn't know binnacles from barnacles.

But he's an Old Salt about Gulf Coast shipping.

Most of our Traffic Agents are landlubbers, yet they'll fool you with their knowledge of foreign commerce. For we serve 12 major Gulf ports—from Brownsville to New Orleans—with more than two dozen rail schedules daily. And knowing about customs, tariffs, sailings, etc. is basic training for MoPac men. Remember that next time you have an import/export problem. We'll help you shape up... before you ship out.
